WALK IN SJTU

🚓 TAXI

Taxis are the fastest means of transportation, traffic permitting. Finding a taxi in the busy streets of the city is easy in most cases. However, during the rush hoursfinding one could be difficult, in which case you may want to take the metro.

Although most of the drivers are familiar with the city, being as specific as possible with directions will speed up your journey and make it cheaper. Normally, quoting the street name of the intersecting street would be preferred.

Charge:

Charge\Time	From 5:00 AM to 11:00 PM	From 11:00 PM to 5:00 AM the next morning
Starting Fare (the first 3 km)	RMB 14 Yuan	RMB 18 Yuan
Additional Charge (3~10km)	RMB 2.4 Yuan/km	RMB3.1 Yuan/km
Additional Charge (10+ km)	RMB 3.6 Yuan/km	RMB4.70 Yuan/km

Payment:

Tipping is not expected. Cash and transportation card are the only means for payment. When giving the address of your destination, it would be better if it is in Chinese as most drivers can speak very little English.

Receipt:

Upon leaving, ask for a receipt (发票 fa1 piao4), which shows the taxi number and the company's telephone number. It is very useful if you leave something behind in the cab or you have a complaint.

China's mobile system is different from the US mobile system. China's mobile system runs on the GSM (Gobal System for Mobile Communications) network and only recognizes two dual frequencies – 900 Hz and 1,800 Hz.

Although most I-phones and blackberries work in China after unlocking them, risk of losing your phone's warrant with your mobile network might not be the best option. A safer way would be to buy a new mobile phone as they are relatively cheap. You might be surprised at what your RMB 150.00 will get you.

If you are in a hurry to buy a simple and inexpensive mobile phone, a walk to Auchan Supermarket (Metro Line 5, Dong Chuan Station) will be fruitful. However, variety might not be something you can find here. If you are into the "what's in" in the mobile world, you might want to check the various digital shops/malls (refer to the Shopping section) located around the city. You can also buy a mobile phone online. (You can try www.jd.com 京东商城)

China's mobile system runs on GSM 900 or GSM 1800. If you phone is not compatible with China's bandwidth. You may either unlock you current phone or buy a new one. You may get your cell phones unlocked at:

- China Mobile office on campus located in the opposite side, 100m left of the main gate of Minhang Campus, Dong Chuan Road.
- China Mobile Xujiahui branch (中国移动徐家汇营业厅): Second floor, NO.1065 Zhao Jiabang Road. (肇家浜路1065号 二楼)

NOTICE

- You can buy your new China Mobile/ Unicom Mobile SIM and recharging cards at Hua Lian Living Center, Minhang Campus.

- Pay attention to the mobile operator's brand (China Mobile/China Telecom/China Unicom). The brand of your SIM card and your recharging card should be the same.

MOBLERECHARGINGSLIPS(充值卡reads as Chong1 Zhi2 Ka3)

The mobile re-charged slips are used to add credits into your mobile phone number. These re-charge slips generally come in denominations of RMB 50 or RMB 100 and are available in most convenience stores and small shops. as a general rule, if you are going to travel outside of Shanghai, it would be best to make sure that you have enough credits on your phone as recharging in other cities might be a problem.
